NAH!

Fun Bible Facts

Does Israel have tornadoes or hurricanes?

Israel is in a zone of the world where hurricanes simply do not happen and a tornado is a very, very rare occurrence. Barely a few recorded tornadoes can be found, including what was termed a rare F2 tornado that hit northwestern Israel On April 4 2006, causing some damage and injuries.

Israel generally gets its winds from the west. However, despite all that wind coming from the sea, there's nothing to cool it down enough and cause rain during the hot 'n dry season from May through to September.

Winter, on the other hand, is cool and pleasant, but can be damp and relatively miserable for those in the mountainous regions like Jerusalem. Generally speaking it rarely goes below zero in the Holy Land, however, once ever couple of years there's a blizzard in the mountains.
